

WASHINGTON, D. C. SEPTEMBER 10, 1916.

Gen. von Linsingen, German commander on the eastern front, looking through a "scherenfernrohr" (a periscope).

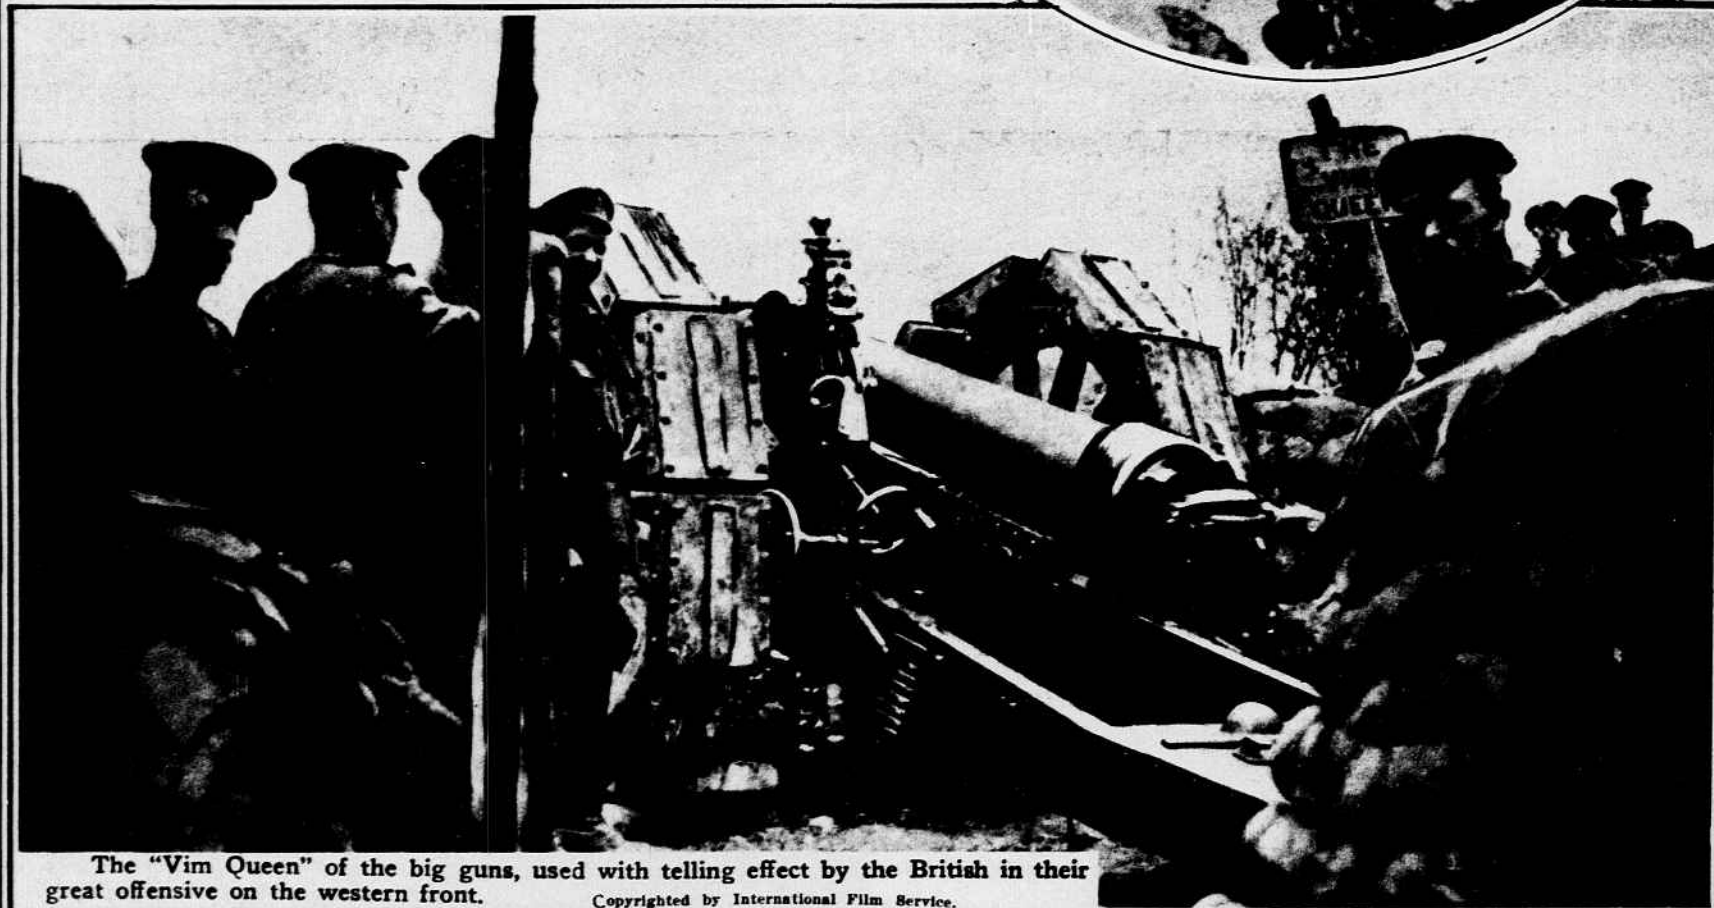

Annamese troops fighting with the allies at Saloniki, having been called into the war by France.

Sending his compliments to the German foes. The size of these projectiles can be appreciated when compared with the figure of the gunner behind.

Copyrighted by International Film Service.

The "Vim Queen" of the big guns, used with telling effect by the British in their great offensive on the western front.

Copyrighted by International Film Service.

French sappers, digging trench tunnels, come out into sunlight for fresh air.

Copyrighted by International Film Service.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Portab Singh (left), commander of the Indian troops on the western front, and the Rajah of Rutlam, who has contributed the greater part of his fortune to the British cause.

Copyright, International Film Service.

Arrival in England of first German prisoners taken in the great allied advance.

Copyrighted by International Film Service.